

Abstract of the Disclosure

A component having at least one support member with a first connecting portion and at least one part with a second connecting portion is formed by activating the second connecting portion by plasma treatment and then combining the first and second connecting portions and securing their attachment to one another by a heat and pressure treatment.

5

002000" 005000" 00